

Lisa Raftery

Lisa Raftery has been ministering to women for over eighteen years. At the University of Indianapolis, she served as a resident assistant for three years, reaching out to hurting girls on campus, getting to know their life stories. After graduation, she taught in a large public high school for six years, again meeting many young women in need of a touch from Christ. Marrying her husband, Eric, thrust her into the world of ministry life, where she has worked with youth, singles, wives, and mothers for the past twelve years.

Lisa is a collaborator and author with the Mr. Right Series, a novel series being enjoyed by teens and young women both nationally and around the world. She also hosts Pink Floats, LifeRaft's segment for women. Whether you're a single woman finding your call, a career woman pursuing your passion, a wife, a mom, or any combination thereof, please know that you are not alone! As a wife, mother of four, and ministry leader, Lisa understands the pressures you face and has a message of hope that will encourage you not only to survive, but also to experience the life your heart desires.
